If Mr. Boutwell on some pleasant day, would only accept all the bids offered at good prices, he would not only gratify the business community who need gold for legitimate use, but would justly punish many a broker of greater or less degree, who creates a fictitious demand for gold by making bins who creates a fictitious demand for gold by making bins what he feels confident will not be accepted, for the mere purpose of seeing his name advertised as a bidder. If this were done just once, three-quarters of them would retare, and on the next occasion the list would retare, and on the next occasion the list would contain the names of those who in real samest wish to buy. Small as the extra purchases of the Treasury were, the effect in ameliorating the condition of the market was perceptibls. This should be an incentive to the Secretary to sell mor next time, or what would be better, to announce cumself as ready to pay off the $100,000,000 of 5-20s anmounced for December at once.
